The following is from program director, Debbie Vanderbeek. This is the story of what she saw and experienced a few days ago. Many of you will not know the people mentioned, but this is a story that everyone needs to read.

I do not even know how or where to begin. This has been the most surreal day. Could this really be happening!? What we saw and experienced today is beyond words. And the tremors continue. When we were leaving the orphanage this afternoon a fairly strong tremor struck. The kids are so high strung.

Everyone, I mean everyone, is in the streets. They have been told not to go into their homes. Nothing is stable. Much is not left standing, unrecognizable. People are still trapped in rubble. The dead literally line the streets.

The Delmas School is no more. One young boy (not in the program or student at the school) was pulled out this afternoon. We took him to his home to lie out in the road with everyone else. Hospitals are either not open or barely functioning. There are just too many injured to be able to take care of. I cleaned the boy up and had medicine to put on the wounds and gave him pain medicine, but I am sure he has internal injuries and broken bones, probably a concussion.

People would come up to the vehicle and beg for us to help them, they were injured. One woman was just crying, begging, pleading for us to help her child who was about to die. Jean Baptiste told me we just couldn't do anything. There are no hospitals, no doctors. People are just lying injured all around. Many are already dead, waiting for someone to come along and recognize them. When they are recognized, the families can do nothing. The morgues are full and closed. They are telling people to just bury the dead wherever they can.

The kids at the orphanage are okay. Flaby was almost crushed by a falling wall, but God spared her. Her fingers and leg were cut by the razor wire, but not too badly.

Several people died at the Delmas School (not HFHC students), the final count is unknown. They were still trying to get people out when we left around 3 p.m. At the Cite Soleil School a wall fell, the blocks for all the homes that were being rebuilt from the hurricanes in 2008 were destroyed, as were the homes that had just been rebuilt.

I hope everyone understands that individual requests about their kids will be difficult to come by and with so many wanting to communicate it will take time to get to all the requests. As I have specific info I will pass it along.

Right now, the best thing people in the States can do is to collect donations and pray. I do not advise people to come yet. We are not sure what kind of supplies can be secured here, if fuel will be available, etc. Long lines at the gas stations today. Hotels are not safe to stay in. Don't know about the water situation yet. No stores were open, no merchants selling on the streets. No banks open. Many banks destroyed and looted. Looting is rampant, of course.

Please keep praying. Help us too by praying as to how we can best help the people here and how we can assist others in their efforts.

Tim & I are fine. God bless you all! —Debbie

Haiti Mission Trip Postponed

Due to the earthquake that hit Haiti on Tuesday, there are no commercial flights going into Haiti at this time. The Haiti Mission Team is postponing their trip until commercial flights are restored. We have received some reports from Haiti through the Hope for Haiti's Children website. The orphanage at Cazeau is intact except for some perimeter walls which fell down. The school in Delmas has collapsed. More information can be gotten from the website. Please keep praying for the people of Haiti and how we can help them.
